USDA Helps Schools Build Back Better, Issues Transitional Nutrition Standards for Coming School Years

The U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) has announced updates to the school nutrition standards that give schools a clear path forward as they build back better from the pandemic.

By issuing transitional standards that will begin in school year (SY) 2022-2023 and that USDA intends to run through SY 2023-2024, USDA is giving schools time to transition from current, pandemic operations, toward more nutritious meals.
